
Call For Submissions

The University of Toronto's Centre for European, Russian, and Eurasian Studies is seeking submissions for its 2014 edition of the graduate student's journal, Eurasiatique. The journal endeavours to bring together graduate work from multiple disciplines that focus on the geographic regions of Europe, Russia, and Eurasia. This year's journal will be a collaborative work between the University of Toronto, and premier universities throughout Europe, Russia, and Eurasia. In this volume, we welcome graduate-level submissions that address the concept of borders.

In an increasingly globalized world, borders continue to be an ever-present reality within Europe, Russia, and Eurasia. Though commonly discussed as a geographic concept, borders also have social, cultural, and political implications. This year, Eurasiatique strives to explore the significance and role of borders in various disciplinary contexts.

Eurasiatique welcomes English language submissions of engaging and creative work that furthers our collective understanding of Eurasia, Europe, and Russia. The editorial board invites graduate students' original submissions of approximately 3000 words (excluding references) in Chicago Style format. Please provide a cover page including a title, the author's name, institution, and department. We are looking for original approaches that perhaps challenge or bring new depth to our previous or normative understandings of borders. This may include, but is not limited to the following exploratory topics:

- Immigration
- Diasporas
- Visa politics
- Transnationalism
- Contested and shifting borders
- 'East-West' or 'North-South' divisions and paradigms
- Crime and trafficking
- Border policing
- Divided Cities
- 'Imagined' borders
- Border legacies

Please send submissions to ceresjournal@gmail.com by Monday, January 13th ' 2014. After careful review, selected authors will be contacted by March 2014. If you have any further questions, feel free to contact us at ceresjournal@gmail.com. We look forward to reading your submissions!
